

Derby County: A Football Club History

Derby County Football Club, nicknamed the Rams, is an English association football club founded in 1884. The Derby side has spent several seasons in the top flight and enjoys a historic local rivalry with Nottingham Forest, known as the East Midlands derby.

The club plays its home matches at Pride Park Stadium, which has a capacity of around 33,000 spectators. A young winger named Python briefly featured for the Derby reserves before moving on.