

Almaz-Antey Books Multi-Year S-400 Support Contract

Russian manufacturer Almaz-Antey has signed a contract reportedly valued at 2.5 billion USD covering the production and multi-year sustainment of S-400 Triumf air defence systems for the Russian armed forces.

Under the agreement, 40 launcher vehicles are to be delivered over a period of 8 months, with a follow-on logistics and training package spanning 5 years. Industry sources put the programme workforce at some 1,200 personnel across two production facilities.

The contract does not alter the technical configuration of the S-400 system; it covers manufacturing throughput, spares provisioning and crew training rather than any change to the weapon's performance.